This report benefits from assistance and constructive commentary from many people. Five persons agreed to read and comment on the draft version of Chapters 1 and 7: Peter Brokensha, Jane Spring, Professors David Stout and David Throsby, and Anna Ward. I have done my best to incorporate their invariably thoughtful advice. The final version, misconceptions and all, is the author's responsibility.

Statistical data form the skeleton of Chapters 2 to 6, with the backbone provided by the Australian Bureau of Statistics and its National Centre for Culture and Recreation Statistics. Barry Haydon and Roger Mableson examined the draft and provided valuable advice. As an independent research worker, the author is in a freer position to interpret and estimate than is the ABS, and for this reason alone the general approval by the nation's foremost statistical institution is important.

The survey of APACA cultural centres in Chapter 6 would not have been such a success without the cooperation of practically all members. I thank them, as well as Anne Warwick for her permission to approach members and Isobel Guldberg for her persistence on the telephone resulting in a 99% response rate. John Furphy (Acorn Antiques) read the draft chapter on Indigenous artists and provided important advice. Libby Baulch (ACC), Caroline Morgan (CAL) and Anna Ward (VISCOPY) reviewed the copyright-related sections of Chapter 6. Nick Hampton provided APRA data. Thanks to them all – again, any remaining errors are mine.

My colleague Sevan Sivacian made a major contribution with new research into newspaper coverage of the arts and the Yellow Pages. He also compiled the statistics on input–output, public funding, tertiary training and other topics, and made valuable comments on the draft report. Sevan has requested that Toni Cavallaro and Oanh Phan of NCVER be specifically thanked for their cooperation along with Geoff Izzard of DEETYA.

No person, however, has had more influence on the project in detail as well as vision than Warren Woodward of the Australia Council. I have been working with Warren on projects since 1986 and have always found him courteous, constructive, highly knowledgeable and ever helpful. It has been a pleasure to work with him through the years, and this study was no exception.
